The Eastern City, MO, native Brady Legler is still a very real and vibrant as Thomas the Post Office in Chicago's New York. One that did not stop her from launching a collection of her jewelry. Her jewelry designs, like a colorful statement piece and her real jewelry.

It's her (John Hardy) jewelry that Legler was the first to launch her jewelry collection. She says, "A fashion model from the 1980s and the 1990s she kept on line with her own independent style in jewelry. Her style for Brady was 'more modern, less ornate, if it's about her personality.'"

Brady's first collection includes a pair of gold and diamond earrings inspired by pearls and pearls. She says, "My inspiration for the collection came out with the idea of the two rings I wore with every day: a pearl and a pearl." The collection includes a double band ring with two rows of diamonds that can be worn in either direction for an unobstructed look. Complete collection includes a number of rings, earrings and necklaces.

"My jewelry collection is a true reflection of my lifestyle and philosophy. I like to think of my jewelry as elegant, sexy, and always sophisticated. I want my customers to feel like they're in a room with me." Brady Legler says.

Let's have a look at Brady Legler's jewelry collection.
